Dear Josh,

Theology I

A note from our mountain retreat that may, God willing, catch you before you head West.

All sources seem agreed that I am the front-running candidate for Science, but that my lack of explicit "bench" credentials is a stumbling block. Also involved are complex issues involving the future direction of Science / and of AAAS itself / and of the succession to Bill Clegg's job.

For myself, I believe I can bring certain unique talents to Science and that I'm ready for a position of this scope and nature. However I doubt that this message will prevail, without the loud and clear support of key individuals in the scientific community.

Because of your great stature and prestige, and because you have been ~~the~~ my staunchest believer in my abilities, I shall greatly appreciate anything you can do to help bring matters to resolution in the immediate (or, as seems more likely, intermediate) future.

This message does not tell you anything new, but it seems worthwhile to underline the prevailing realities. As ever Anselm
